DEATH CAME TO SAMUEL TUTTLE

Succumbs at Indianapolis Hospital
Where he Was Taken Suffering From Fractured Skull.

SURVIVED BY TWO CHILDREN

Was Former Postmaster of Orange and Remains Will be Taken
There For Burial.

Samuel Tuttle, 70 years old, a former resident of this county, died last night in the City Hospital in Indianapolis, where he was taken last Friday morning, suffering from a fractured skull.

The cause of his death is a mystery as he was found unconscious in the State House yard and it could not be learned how the injury was suffered. He died without regaining consciousness. The police are of the opinion that he fell, his head striking a stone. The theory has been advanced that he was assaulted and robbed. If this was the case the robbers failed to take his watch and is not given much credit by the police. Fred Caldwell of this city was called to take charge of the body. The coroner of Marion county has begun an investigation as to the cause.

Mr. Tuttle was well known in this county and was formerly postmaster of Orange. Of late years he had made his home with his daughter in Shelbyville and at the time of the injury he was identified by letters addressed to him there. His wife died April 12, 1907, and is buried in Fayetteville.

Mr. Tuttle was a member of the Christian church and was a highly respected citizen. His untimely death came as a surprise to his many friends in this county.

He is survived by two children, Mrs. Mary Sparks of Shelbyville and James Tuttle of Michigan.

The remains will be taken to Orange for burial. Leaving Indianapolis tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock over the I. & C. the body will be taken to Orange, where the services will be held at two o'clock in the Christian church. Burial will take place in the Orange cemetery.

HAS SMALLPOX.

New Castle Courier: The first case of smallpox in New Castle in over a year developed Monday morning with Chester Marshall, aged twenty-six, an automobile workman, as the patient. Marshall's disease was pronounced smallpox by his attending physician, Dr. D. S. Wiggins and Dr. C. E. Canady, city health officer and Dr. E. K. Westhafer, county health officer.

"KEITH OF THE BORDER"

The Daily Republican will start a new serial story tomorrow night that is sure to please and entertain. "Keith of the Border" is a tale of Western life, which is more realistic than any story of its kind that was ever written. It has been conceded to be one of the most vigorous and thrilling stories ever written of the Indian days on the frontier. Western life is depicted with such care and precision that the novel is almost equal to a historian's account of the times. Combined with that is a story of great human interest, in which intrigue, mystery and adventure plays an important part. The story is by Randall Parrish, who has already qualified as a standard novelist by writing several other works of recognized worth.

COLORED BALL PLAYED DIES

"Snowball" Was Well Known Here
Among the Fans.

Word has been received in Spiceland of the death of John Merida, known to baseball fans as "Snowball." His death occurred in Kansas City, where he was playing ball this year. "Snowball" had been in this city numerous times and played with the Spiceland academy team. Later he played with the A. B. C.'s of Indianapolis and the Leland Giants of Chicago. The remains will be brought to Spiceland for burial.

DESERTER GOES TO WORKHOUSE

Bert Shine Who Took French Leave and Went to His Home in St.
Paul, is Fined.

THIRTY DAYS' PAY WITHHELD

Relatives in St. Paul have been advised of the fine received by Bert Shine of that place who deserted from the U. S. navy service a few weeks ago. It will be remembered that Shine left his ship while it was in port at an eastern city and then took French leave and headed straight for St. Paul. His reason for deserting his ship was given by him as homesickness and his desire to see his mother, Mrs. John C. Leech. She advised him to go back at once and surrender to the authorities at Cincinnati and serve out his time. This he did and as a result of so doing, the navy officers let him off with an easy fine, only giving him thirty days in the guard house and holding out thirty days' pay. The latter was taken to pay the expenses of taking him back east to join his ship.

TO ENDORSE PROF. WILLIAMS TONIGHT

Meeting Will be Held at Main Street Christian Church, to Which Public is Invited

THE REV. LANSING TO SPEAK

The meeting to endorse Prof. J. H. Williams, principal of the Washington school, who will work among people of his own race in Texas this summer under the auspices of the International Reform Bureau of Washington, D. C., will be held at the Main Street Christian church this evening. James E. Watson will preside at the meeting and it is expected that Prof. Williams will make a brief address. The local colored man has been employed by the Bureau to preach temperance among the colored people of Texas this summer. It is very likely that the position will be permanent.

The chief address of the evening will be delivered by the Rev. Isaac J. Lansing, general secretary of the Reform Bureau, on the subject, "The Conservation of Humanity." The Rev. Mr. Lansing comes here from Richmond, where he delivered an address last evening. In the last seventeen days he has given seven addresses at Cleveland, six at Cincinnati, and four at Columbus. He is said to be a speaker of great power and eloquence. There will be no admission at tonight's meeting.

Detachable trains are features of this year's bridal gowns.

WALKER SALE TO BE JUNE 1

Annual Auction This Year Will be Twice as Large as in Any Previous Year.

OVER 135 HEAD ARE TO BE SOLD

Cattle Fanciers Are Expected to Gather Here From All Parts of United States.

A. P. Walker's annual Jersey cattle sale will be held at the Jersey Isle stock farm, west of the city, Thursday, June 1. It will be the seventh annual auction held by the local importer, breeder and fancier and it is expected that the crowd this year will be larger than ever before. The sale will include one hundred and thirty-five head of imported Jersey cattle and their offspring. Twice as many animals are to be sold this year as at any previous year, and consequently the auction will be twice as large.

The sale will be begun promptly at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. It is announced that there will be no delay due to the fact that there will be a very large number of head to be sold this year and it is believed that the auction will consume the whole day's time. The sale will be held, as has been the case heretofore, in a large tent with seats on all sides to accommodate the buyers and the many people from this city who attend.

It is believed that the crowd this year will be larger than ever before, as the fame of the annual event here is spreading farther each year. Heretofore buyers have come here from distant points, many traveling thousands of miles from the extreme borders of the United States and this year will be no exception. Probably more prospective buyers come from the southern States than from other district in the United States. Many eastern as well as western fanciers are attracted here by the event as well.

Mr. Walker will no doubt, sadly miss his beautiful country home, which was destroyed by fire only a few weeks ago. It has been his custom in previous years to entertain elaborately many of the visiting buyers and other guests during the time of the sale. At former sales Mr. Walker has held a little informal reception in the nature of a "talkfest" on Jersey cattle in particular on the night before the sale. This custom will no doubt be followed this year. At that time it has been the custom to serve refreshments, have a short musical program and praise the features of the imported Jersey.

In past years, there has been one bull which has brought the big price of the sale. At one sale a bull sold for $11,000, which is the top price recorded for any one animal at any of the six previous sales. Other animals have brought a price near that amount. Mr. Walker says that he has no idea which bull will bring the banner price this year. "Wait until the night after the sale," says Mr. Walker, laughingly, "and then I can tell you which brought the high price."

"Pennithorpe's Raleigh" is conceded to be one of the best if not the best bull in the sale. He is especially desired by many Jersey fanciers by reason of his close relation to "Mabel's Raleigh," whose blood is greatly wanted this year, so it is said.

Every animal in the catalogue will be sold to the highest bidder, without reserve, by-bid, or any protecting resource whatever—provided more than one bid is made. Mr. Walker represents that the herd which will be sold is absolutely free from disease of any sort, and in perfect

TABERNACLE IS NOW CERTAINTY

Finance Committee Reports Favorably and Place Committee is Ordered to Proceed at Once.

WILL BE BUILT ON MULL LOT

Planned to Begin Next Monday—
Cottage Prayer Meetings Begin Tomorrow Night.

At a joint meeting of the finance and the place committees last night, which is a part of the organization of the Orr revival meeting which will be held here June 7 to 21 inclusive, it was decided that a tabernacle be built on the Mull lot in North Perkins street. It is planned to have the material on the ground by next Monday when the work will be started on the structure.

At the meeting last night the finance committee reported that all of the church boards of the city had agreed to share their allotted part of the guarantee fund and that half of the amount could be had at any time. The committee on finance authorized the committee on place to begin preparation for building the immense tabernacle at once. It is estimated that the lumber alone will cost approximately eight hundred dollars.

Another meeting of the place committee will be held this evening and final preparations will be made for starting the work of erecting the tabernacle. A member of the place committee said this afternoon that the lumber had been arranged for and that the cost of the lumber and estimated cost of erection would be reported at the meeting tonight.

It is at present planned to cover the whole Mull lot with the tabernacle. It has been estimated that the building will seat about two thousand people if it is built in that fashion. It will be a very cheap wooden affair and will have no floor. The entrance will probably be in Perkins street.

At a meeting of the Rushville Ministerial Association yesterday afternoon, the series of cottage prayer meetings were arranged for. The meetings will be held on Wednesday and Friday nights. At each meeting the place and the leaders for the next series of meeting will be arranged.

The meetings for tomorrow night are as follows: With Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Aldridge, Mrs. Mary Holmes, leader; with Mr. and Mrs. Lon Link in North Perkins street, T. M. Green, leader; with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Pugh in West Seventh street, E. B. Thomas, leader; with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. George, the Rev. A. W. Jamieson, leader; with Mr. and Mrs. William Cherry at the corner of Seventh and Jackson streets, Prof. J. H. Scholl, leader; with Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Myers in North Harrison street, the Rev. E. C. Myers, leader; with Mr. and Mrs. Kaster at 1028 North Arthur street, K. L. Benson, leader; with Charles Applegate, W. Allen, leader; with Mrs. Curry, Capt. Enoch, leader; with Arthur Gates, in West Second street, the Rev. J. B. Meacham, leader; with Mrs. Mary Dixon in North Morgan street, B. F. He says the dove can sit there and never even be scorched. A baby has been born to the wife and word has been sent to the mother-in-law who threatened to wreck the home at one time, to come and be a guest. Daniel says that she has consented to come.

CONSTABLE MAY GET AUTO SPEEDERS

Town and City Officials Are Becoming More Alert to Reckless and Fast Driving of Machines.

MANY ENFORCE STRICT LAWS

Motorists who contemplate touring to the big race to be held in Indianapolis on May 30th, will do well to travel slowly through many of the Indiana towns. In past seasons the tourists seem to have been so imbued with the idea of speed that in many of the little villages the townspeople reaped a harvest from the strangers in the way of fines and costs.

Most of the incorporated towns have laws which require a very much reduced speed upon the paved streets and it will be advisable for automobilists to look out. Towns east of Indianapolis, particularly, are after as much of an income as possible from this source, and will consider as sufficient evidence the word of people on the street who will testify that the motor car was going "too fast."

IS INJURED IN FALL FROM TRAIN

Stranger, Giving Name as Doyle is Either Put Off or Falls off
C. H. & D. Passenger.

PAINFUL WOUND IN HIS HEAD

A stranger, giving his home as Hamilton, Ohio, and his name as Doyle, was either put off or fell off C. H. & D. train No. 30, westbound, due here at 2:14 o'clock, this afternoon and suffered painful injuries. A wound was cut in his head and he suffered many painful bruises. The accident happened at a point about half-way between the C. H. & D. freight depot and the L. E. & W. crossing. After the passenger had crossed the L. E. & W. tracks, it was stopped and backed up, where the man was taken aboard and carried on to Indianapolis to be treated.

Witnesses say that the man was riding the "blind baggage" and that he was thrown off by a trainmen. This was denied at both the freight and passenger depots of the railroad. At the passenger station it was stated that the man fell off the train and at the freight depot an employe refused to discuss the incident. It is said that Doyle said that he had money enough to pay his fare to Indianapolis.

MARRIED BY SQUIRE.

Charley Pea and Jennie Marie Foust were married last evening by Squire Kratzer.

STRANGE THINGS ASKED OF POLICE

Women, as a Rule Have Poor Conception of The Duties of an Officer.

NEW STUNT ASKED YESTERDAY

One Wanted Them to See That Her Husband Did Not Drink Too Much.

The police here are asked almost every day to do something impossible. Nine times out of ten it is a woman who asks them. The women it seems, have a very poor conception of what the police are supposed to do and what not to do. The police have had numerous experiences with women calling them up and wanting them to do anything from collecting a bill to regulating the weather.

Policeman McAllister had a new one sprung on him yesterday afternoon which is a world beater. He was called to the phone and the woman on the other end wanted him to see that her husband did not get too many drinks. She stated that her husband had been staying at home where she supplied him with whiskey at certain intervals. The woman stated that the supply had given out and she had allowed her husband to come down to the business district. "Would the officer please see that he did not get too much?" asked the woman. "Certainly madam, I will anchor on his trail and put on the brakes if necessary," replied the officer.

Now the policeman did not have anything else to do but just watch this one man, who it was supposed could not take care of himself. At least this is what the woman thought. McAllister is very good natured and has a fine disposition, so he just took the matter under advisement and the woman who did not know what the police are supposed to do was lead to believe that her husband was being taken care of in the proper manner.

For all that she knows the officer may have taken him for a stroll between drinks and then taken him back to the bar. Or again, if the hen-pecked one needed a Turkish bath, the officer had nothing else to do, so he went with him and saw that the attendant gave him courteous treatment. After this, if the man was hungry the officer only had to take him to a restaurant and see that he was given the best of food.

By this time it may have been getting late, so the policeman, having no other business to attend to but look after this one man, called a cab and escorted him to his residence. Here the woman jumps all over the policeman for not bringing him home sooner or for not arresting him or for both, you never can tell.

Why is a policeman? Just ask one if you do not believe it.

Millions of Folks Use Only 'Cascarets'

They never Have Headache, Biliousness, Sluggish, Inactive Bowels or a Bad Stomach to Make Them Miserable.

A million boxes a month. That's the sale of Cascarets. And every tablet in every box means a day of good cheer. Think what a world of happiness this candy laxative has brought to men and women—also the children. Are you getting your share?

Cascarets cure bowel troubles when they have developed. But that is the least of their uses. Their best service is to prevent the many ills that come from inactive bowels. Think of the days when you are not at your best. The mornings when you don't feel right, the afternoon when you are lousy, the evenings when you are irritable. The cause lies in the bowels.

One Cascaret makes everything different. Don't say I'll take it tonight. Take it at once. Carry a box in your pocket. The hours before bedtime are too good to be wasted. Their action is as natural as the action of fruit on the bowels. They are sold by all druggists at 10 cents per box.

May Quarterly Meeting was held at Walnut Ridge Friday, Saturday and Sunday of last week. The speakers were Levi Mills of Wilmington, Ohio, Superintendent of the Evangelistic and Pastoral Work of Wilmington Yearly meeting. Also Richard Haworth, Instructor in the Biblical department of the Fairmount Academy, Mary Miers Harold of Indianapolis and Chas. E. Tebbets, general supt. of the Friends Board of Foreign Missions. The crowd on the public highway and hilarious conduct by people from surrounding towns who usually come to May Quarterly making it a gaily day, was decidedly smaller than former years for which the people of Carthage and members of the Ridge Quarterly are decidedly thankful. The attendance at all the sessions was unusually large. The interest was very good and many of the older members of the church have said it was the best Quarterly meeting that they remember. This was largely due to the presence and ministry of Levi Mills, who twenty years ago was at Carthage at the opening of the U. S. Board & Paper Co., and preached at that time. Rev. Mills is a man of great ability as a minister and the large audience which have had the pleasure of hearing him at this time are more than pleased with his preaching and wish he would some day return here.

Fay Winslow and Roy Small and the Misses Katherine Newsom and Frances Wall attended the convention at Spiceland Sunday.

Hanna's Green Seal "The Made-to-Wear Paint"

If you expect to do any painting, you are interested—you should be—in the quality of the paint to be used.

In any given job of painting, labor represents practically two-thirds, material one-third the cost.

It stands to reason that with so much expense in labor, the enduring quality of the paint is all important.

Why have the painting done unless the protection and durability of the job is sought?

How is one to determine the true value and obtain paint that may be depended upon for durability?

HANNA'S GREEN SEAL PAINT IS NOT A SECRET. This paint has the printed formula on every package.

The makers have confidence and take pride in the quality and tell the public the composition of the paint.

IS THIS OF ANY VALUE TO YOU? IT OUGHT TO BE.

GRANDMOTHERS' BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Color and Beauty of the Hair Preserved with a Harmless Remedy Made from Sage.

Druggists everywhere comment on the fact that they are selling large quantities of sage for making old-fashioned "sage tea," such as was used by our grandmothers for promoting the growth of their hair, making it fluffy and beautiful and restoring its natural color.

The demand for this well-known herb for this purpose has been so great that one manufacturer has taken advantage of the fact and has placed on the market an "Easi-Sage Tea" containing sulphur, a valuable remedy for dandruff and scalp itching, and imitations, called "Worth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

GRACEFUL AND ATTRACTIVE WOMEN

If you are thin and want to be plump; if you have wrinkles in your face that you are not proud of, if your skin is sallow or subject to pimples or blackheads take Mi-o-na stomach tablets for two weeks and notice the change.

Nine tenths of the thin people are thin because the stomach is not active; it is not mixing thoroughly with the natural digestive juices the food put into it, and consequently is not extracting from the food enough nourishment matter for the blood to distribute to every part of the body. If the stomach does not do its work properly the nourishment in the food you eat is passed along without giving to the body any flesh building elements.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets quickly build up the stomach so that it extracts from the food all the elements necessary to form good solid flesh.

If you are thin try a two weeks treatment of Mi-o-na stomach tablets; two with each meal will work wonders.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are guaranteed to cure indigestion, acute or chronic, or money back. Sold by F. B. Johnson & Co. druggist, and leading druggists everywhere, at 50 cents a box.

OLD SOLDIERS IN A REUNION

Richmond Giving the Week to Indiana Veterans.

THE TOWN GAILY DECORATED

In All the History of the Annual Encampment of the Indiana Department, G. A. R., It Is Said That Never Has an Encampment City Given So Much Attention to Decorations for the Event.

Richmond, Ind., May 16.—Richmond is in readiness to receive the thousands of visitors who will come tomorrow to attend the thirty-second annual encampment of Indiana department, Grand Army of the Republic, and the annual conventions of its various auxiliary bodies.

No city in Indiana that has acted as host to the Grand Army of the Republic has been more beautifully decorated, and the visitors will find outward evidence of welcome. In addition to the stately white columns of attractive design that stand at every street intersection in the business section of the city, and the great profusion of flags and emblems that flank the streets on either side, there are scores of electric light strands that extend across the streets 1,000 feet apart and each of the columns is surmounted by clusters of incandescent lamps.

The advance guard of the civil war veterans arrived in the city today. Ohio will send large delegations as well as Indiana. Richmond lies close to the state line, and being easy of access to many Ohio cities within a radius of seventy-five miles, the chance for the Buckeye boys in blue to visit their Hoosier brethren will not be overlooked. Commander Asbury of the Indiana department and Colonel J. R. Fesler, assistant adjutant general, together with several other staff officers, will reach Richmond tomorrow and will establish headquarters in the Westcott hotel.

Commander Gilman of the national organization, G. A. R., will be here and will speak at the public mass meeting tomorrow night in the Coliseum.

BRANCHES IN ALL THE PRINCIPAL CITIES

If the supreme court does not have the power to bust the trusts, surely they are non-bustable.

Five hundred thousand dollars in silver went to the bottom in the Merida, and now the mermaids can have their new spring hats.

It is not true that the secretary of war resigned because the militia officers were always in the foreground when pictures were taken.

The El Paso people seem to think our soldiers should fight, bleed and die, to protect their right to see the battle from the roof tops.

It can't be possible can it, that John D. may be threatened with a jail sentence if he does not obey the mandate of the United States Supreme court?

Henry Van Dyke has resumed teaching of literature at Princeton, and we hope he gives due attention to the classic style of the base ball reporters.

No doubt it's dangerous in El Paso when the Mexicans are fighting, but perhaps not more so than when the cowboys come in to spend a few week's pay.

You can telephone from New York to Denver now, but on learning the toll rates, we decided not to call up our cousins and ask if they were going down to the postoffice tonight.

American experts are recognizing Persia's finances. If they learned their business well at home, they will at once raise the tax rate, increase the assessment and borrow all that anybody will lend.

Karl Baedeker, the famous guide book man, is dead. We were hoping that some day he would get up a guide book to the editorials of some of our contemporaries, that we hesitate to mention here.

Just how will the Indianapolis Sun explain the action of the Supreme court in ordering the dissolution of oil trust under the Sherman anti-trust law? Will they ascribe that to Big Business in any way?

Now, will it be possible that the insurgent Republicans will want all the glory for the prosecution which has resulted in the Supreme court decision against the oil trust? Will the Democratic party place a bid for the honor? Or will the honor rest where it should rest—on the shoulders of the Republican party, which is the father of the Sherman anti-trust law that made the Supreme court action possible.

The value of using a clean newspaper to advertise in and of telling the truth in advertising were the principal topics at the last luncheon of the Portland (Ore.) Ad club. The principal speakers were W. F. Lipman of the firm of Lipman, Wolfe & Co.; Adolph Wolfe of the same firm; Frank A. Spencer, Will H. Knight and F. O. Baker of the Spokane Spokesman-Review. Mr. Lipman in his address said a newspaper to secure a foundation must be truthful, accurate and clean. He told the advertising men to pick out the clean newspaper when they wanted to advertise. "Never select the mushy kind," he said, "for they will do you no good."

Bishop McFaul wants newspapers to observe the Ten Commandments, says an editorial writer on the Indianapolis Star. In what way they have violated the commandments he does not indicate. So far as the Star is aware, no newspaper is engaged in worshipping any graven images, nor, as a rule, do they take the name of the Lord in vain. If they do not always remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, it is because ministers and other people insist upon having the news on Monday morning, including reports of Sunday sermons and other religious occurrences. Newspapers, meaning the men who make them, are not in the habit of violating the fifth, sixth, seventh or ninth commandments more than other men possessed of the same human frailties. The eighth which forbids bearing false witness, newspapers are most particular to observe, if for no other reason than that libel laws require this course. There remains the tenth commandment, which relates to the sin of covetousness, but this is not a sin peculiarly characteristic of newspapers, or, as the bishop says, journalists. In fact, it is an offense they are remarkably free from seeing, as they do, all sides of life and the trials and cares incident to wealth as well as to poverty.

What the good bishop seems to have chiefly in mind is truth telling, forgetting, perhaps, that truth is not one of the virtues insisted on in the commandments, except as it relates to testimony concerning one's "neighbor." There are many other varieties of falsehood save the one there specified, and, in spite of what critics of the press may say, the endeavor of reputable papers is to avoid all misstatements at all times and on all occasions. They may not tell all the truth, for not all the truth is fit to print, and there is some that is not wise to print. It would, perhaps, surprise the bishop to know how much "truth" is withheld from publication for the benefit of the public every day of the year by wise and judicious editors.

He would have journalists adopt a code of ethics similar to those adopted by lawyers and physicians and adhere to it on their honor. They have a code and it is a better one than either profession named can offer, though it may never have been made into a formal pledge. The lawyer's code does not prevent him from going before a court and using every effort to save a guilty man from punishment or from profiting by a legal technicality to gain possession for his client of property that in equity belongs to another. The medical code insures the hiding of professional "mistakes" by the brethren, in the principle, perhaps, of senatorial courtesy, but it does not prevent the dear doctors from disparaging each other when the spirit moves them, or from indulging in exhibitions of envy and uncharitableness. The principle upon which newspaper men proceed, as a class, is to tell the news as accurately as possible and to treat each and every man fairly with whom they have to deal. Being fallible, like other men, they make mistakes, and no one is better aware of these than themselves. But they are also aware that the most of the criticism directed toward them is in reality not because they do not tell the truth, but that they tell it too well.

EDITORIALETTES.

We think a wheeze about the sweet girl graduate is in order, but we can't think of any.

Our idea of nothing to get excited about is a deputy fish and game commissioner.

The New Castle Courier opines: "They say that now right on top of paved streets, 'brightways' and voting wet, Rushville is going to get a wholesale revival."

Perhaps one of those things would not hurt New Castle if the town is reflected in the daily newspapers.

Convicts in the Michigan City prison have struck for an eight-hour day. They do not fear a lock-out.

"You can raise money in New Castle for most anything, but a new church," is an assertion of the New Castle Courier.

That speaks well for the town. Surprised they admit it? Well, so are we.

By putting on the screens today and not waiting another minute after reading this dope, you will keep all of the young flies in the house.

They will be easier to swat than the old ones, y'a know.

Yes, we noticed several straw hats.

The esteemed Jacksonian, which we read Tuesdays and Thursdays, would like to see an insane Fourth in this town.

Sorry we can't agree on that particular topic, ole top.

Say, was that street sweeper lost in shipping?

ARE NOTIFIED OF CHARGE

Summons is Sent to Carthage Straw Board Works Today.

The officers of the Carthage plant of the United States Board and Paper company were notified today that an affidavit had been filed against the company, charging stream pollution. A similar charge was quashed in the circuit court yesterday on a technical error, after the defense had filed a motion to quash. The affidavit, which was made out by a deputy fish and game commission, did not name the court in which the action was filed. A representative from the State fish and game office here yesterday said that a vigorous effort would be made to convict the corporation and make an example of it.

Edwin I. Bowen, aged sixty years, of Rushville, and Mrs. Sarah Conway, aged fifty-one, also of that city, were united in marriage here Sunday morning, the ceremony being performed at nine o'clock by the Rev. G. Jensen at the home of the minister, says the Shelbyville Democrat. The wedding was a quiet event, as only a few of the relatives of the couple were present. Mr. Bowen is a brother of Mrs. Herman Avery of South West street, and he and his wife remained here until Monday afternoon as guests at the Avery home. They left for Rushville where they will reside at 830 West Seventh street. Mr. Bowen is employed in the I. & C. shops at Rushville, but he was a resident of this city until recently and is well known here. He has many friends in this city and county. The marriage is the third for Mr. Bowen and the second for his bride. It was reported here early last week that the couple had been married at Rushville. The license was obtained by the couple from the county clerk at Rushville.

WALKER SALE

health. Each member of the herd was either imported from the Jersey Isle or bred from imported parents. Tuberculosis is unknown on Jersey Isle, according to authorities on cattle. There has been no chance for Mr. Walker's herd to contract disease. Certificates of tuberculin test will be furnished the buyer of each animal over six months of age.

The Jersey Isle stock farm is an institution of which Rushville and Rush county people should be justly proud. It puts the city on the map all over the United States where Rushville would no doubt never be heard of were it not for the annual auction here. Since Mr. Walker's annual sale is one of the biggest held in the United States and is growing in size each year, not many years will elapse until Rushville will be recognized as an important Jersey cattle center and will be far famed as such. It will no doubt grow to such proportions that, when Mr. Walker has finished his work, it will be carried on by successors and will come to be a standing institution in the county.

The large crowd of buyers which will visit here this year will no doubt congest the hotel accommodations in the city. The opinion has been expressed, however, that with three large hotels here and numerous other rooming houses, the visiting buyers and guests can be easily accommodated.

As in past years, arrangements have been made with the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction Company to handle the crowd on the day of the sale. All cars with the exception of the "Connersville Dispatch" will stop at stop 28, which is the one within easy walking distance of the Jersey Isle stock farm, on the day previous to and on the day of the sale. Heretofore trains have been run to and from the farm and this city to haul the crowds.

* INVENTS FLYTRAP, *
* IGNORING THEORIES. *

A flytrap made on scientific principles has just been offered to Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the State Board of Health, for approval by C. F. Hodge, professor of biology in Clark university. The invention holds that because flies are a necessary evil it is no reason why they should not be caught. The trap ignores the usual method of extermination by keeping the garbage can covered and the barnyard manure bed inclosed. The trap would be as useless without a congestion of flies as a thirteen-inch gun for a fowling piece. Prof. Hodge says "Swat the fly," but he speaks literally and has no faith in fine-spun theories. He admits that a pair of flies in April means 1,000,000 in August. Dr. Hurty said recently he ought to have a good market for flytraps, but that he has not been able to try the device, since flies have been late in arriving this spring.

THE CASH INTRIGUE

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE doors offered but a brief resistance after the two guards had been beaten down and torn and snarled over, and then the dust blackened mob came bursting in, at their head Lillian Breed, the incarnation of wild atavistic gypsyhood, the incarnation of all the evil things that are red.

"Welcome to our home!" she cried, and, thrusting her left arm beneath that of Blagg, she wheeled with him into the library, while their followers poured after them like a foul flood throughout the house.

"Help yourselves, my good friends," she shouted. "The house is yours and all that it contains, even to its unwelcome hosts, if you find them."

In the library Blagg jumped upon the very table which Breed had so lately quitted and clapped his hands for silence.

"Order there!" he shouted and stamped heavily with his nail studded heel upon the polished mahogany of the table top.

"Who orders order?" roared a half drunken tinner who had already secured a decanter from the dining room and now crowded into the door. His face was blackened with powder smoke. He raised the decanter to his lips and took a long pull of the liquor. "Who orders order? Orders are for slaves! I defy orders!"

"WHY, LOOK WHO'S HERE!" SHE CRIED.

A lean little man with eyes as sharp as steel needles suddenly whipped a knife from his belt and stabbed the tinner in the throat. He fell without a groan. Those around him only laughed, but order was obtained.

"This is business in the name of liberty and equality!" commanded Blagg. "Hold yourselves in restraint. Remember that we came here to get a billion and a half of dollars for the cause. Every one of you must help us to carry it from here, and remember that we have all sworn to kill the first man who tries to make away with any of it or to appropriate a dollar to his own uses. After we have established equality and fraternity then every man may do as he likes, but tonight we must act for the commonweal. Come forward as your names are called."

They came to him as he called until he had named a score.

"That is all for now," he directed. "The rest of you wait here in your detachments of tens until you are called from below."

Lillian had stood at the side of the fireplace, her hand upon the knob of the little door which led into her grandfather's retiring room. Now Blagg jumped down from the table to her side, and together they threw open the door. Lillian broke out instantly into a shrill laugh.

"Why, look who's here!" she cried. "If it isn't my dear old friend, Mrs. Rensselaer."

Mrs. Rensselaer stepped back from her vain attempts to bolt the door. With her gray hair and her neat gown and her calm dignity she overawed Lillian for a moment, and then anger came as a natural reaction.

"Why, how delightful!" said Lillian, with mock suavity. "Mrs. Rensselaer, you must come out and let me introduce you to some of my friends. Ladies," she called, "I am going to turn Mrs. Rensselaer over to the reception committee."

The women, hideous travesties of their sex in all their grim frowns and excitement, grinned and pressed forward.

"This is Mrs. Rensselaer," continued Lillian, dragging forth her many years' companion. "She is the last lady of one of our very, very oldest families. None of her ancestry has worked since America was a nation. Her nephew is General Rensselaer, who is commander in chief of the army of Emperor Kelvin, Philip I. I know you will enjoy her society."

A mere slip of a girl, thin and formless, but whose face already bore the unmistakable traces of living death, laughed a shrill laugh and with a soiled cap that had once been a boy's slapped Mrs. Rensselaer across the face.

Flushing crimson with the indignity, Mrs. Rensselaer turned to Lillian, but she had neither time to protest nor need of it, for Lillian, obeying another of the sudden tigerish impulses to which in the past week she had wholly given herself, changed her attitude completely and with blazing eyes rushed between Mrs. Rensselaer and her tormentors.

"That will do!" she cried. "Mrs. Rensselaer was my friend for a great many years and treated me more patiently than I deserved. She is my guest now and must be respected as such. Mrs. Rensselaer, sit here," and she seated her one time social tutor and sponsor behind the library table in the chair that Breed had lately vacated. "Whitney! Gaspar! Williams! Harvey! Perth! Green! Stand around this table and protect her from any further insults in my name! As for you"—and she turned to the young woman who had slapped Mrs. Rensselaer; her eyes narrowed and grew cold as she confronted the girl—"take her out and throw her in the lake," she directed.

Two men, laughing cruelly, seized hold of her and began dragging her toward the door.

"But I can't swim!" shrieked the girl. "That's why I am having you thrown in the lake," said Lillian coolly. "The rest of you will take note by this that Mrs. Rensselaer is to be protected."

She started back toward the door of the smaller room. The girl, struggling against the two who had her in charge, suddenly burst into a stream of vituperative profanity so vicious that even Lillian, inured as she was by the past week's experience to language of the sort, shuddered.

"I must have your rings and your brooch, I think, Mrs. Rensselaer," said she, and, swiftly going behind the table, she disengaged the diamond cluster from Mrs. Rensselaer's throat and stripped the rings from the unresisting fingers. Even as she did this her mood changed again, and she whispered, "It is the best thing for you." Taking the jewels in her hand, she cried, "A gift from aristocracy to equality and fraternity!" and she tossed them in the air.

A hundred hands reached for them as they came down, and a clamor of excited voices told how popular that action had been.

"Come on," she said; "we have work to do." And, followed by Blagg and his score of picked men, she hurried through the little rear room.

They found the closet door open and its rear wall pushed back, revealing the narrow secret staircase. Single file they hurriedly descended this, Lillian at the head, and turned into the wide cemented vestibule where an electric light was already burning. Lillian dropped down before the combination knob and turned it carefully backward and forward several times.

"I feared so," she said to Blagg, who knelt beside her. "The combination has been changed."

Blagg took the knob in his long, sensitive fingers and, not looking at it, bent his ear close to it, while Lillian laid her bare arm loosely across his shoulders. He turned the knob slowly and gently, he stopped and turned it backward, slowly and gently, and then smiled as he gave the ring of the door a clutch and pulled. The door came open.

"It's a good thing that I practiced those long, long hours every night on that sample knob in my room upstairs," he said as he went on to the next one.

Slowly, but with remarkable skill, he worked his way through the four iron doors until, with Lillian by his side, he had thrown the last one open, and there in the vault, with a great pile of gold and bills scattered thickly about him, with his robe and crown still on and his scepter in his hand, stood Henry Breed.

"Cash!" he cried. "Cash! The greatest force in all the world! The great social dynamo! The golden lever of Archimedes! Cash! Salute your master, Cash, loyal subjects, and your master's master, the king of Cash!"

"Grandfather," said Lillian, hurrying to him, "come with me. We want to put this money away and lock it up so no one can get it. See, you have left all the doors open!"

The babble of voices from the upper part of the house caused him to straighten up, and his dim old eyes grew wide.

"Hush! They are coming!" he said. "They shan't have it!" he suddenly screamed. "It is mine! Mine! Every dollar of it!"

He rushed toward the door to close it, but he stumbled and fell upon the floor and lay quite still.

As soon as Henry Breed was carried out there was room for the full score of men in the big vault, and Blagg called them all in by name, each one as he came forward loosing two long brown sacks from about his middle.

"Gather up the money from the floor first," Blagg directed, "then take the drawers systematically, beginning at the bottom and working up."

Eagerly the men began filling their sacks, with many exclamations of animal gratification as the silken feel of the paper and the metallic touch of the metal glided through their fingers.

In the house above the gentlemen and ladies of equality and fraternity had hunted out the stores of food and liquor. These dispatched, they swarmed over the house like rats, seeking what they might pilfer or destroy. They searched with almost whining eagerness in every nook and cranny large enough to conceal human life. They did not find Zelfhan, but they did find Jens, and he faced them and fought and died standing, as he had preferred.

Had he remained concealed for but a few brief moments he might still have lived, for there came suddenly upon the big gray house a new and a terrible sound, borne by swift, shadowy engines that swept upward along the wide curving driveway almost noiseless, except for a rush and a whirr. Out of the purring silence they burst upon the rabble outside with a sharp rattling hailstorm of leaden death.

Kelvin and his squad of flying Gatlings had arrived, and close behind him trotted the detachment that had been bivouacked nearest the gates. He mowed down men as if they had been weeds. Stalwart men in khaki carried a Gatling and planted it in the very doorway, pouring its deadly blight back into the hall. They set it up next at the library door and swept that room as bare and clear of living humanity as if a flood had washed it out, while the men in khaki swarmed through the house, pursuing the followers of Blagg into bloody corners and exterminating them as if they had been vermin. A detachment, with Rensselaer and Kelvin in the lead, stepped over the ghastly, huddled heaps in the library, hurried back through the little room and poured down the narrow secret stairway. As they had swept through the library Rensselaer had caught a brief glimpse of a gray haired woman in a black silk gown, with her head upon her folded arms, sitting at the table, but the picture was confused with others of its riddled and useless kind, and he hurried on ahead.

Kelvin had promised himself to be in the lead as they went down the stairway, but as he turned into the closet entrance a huge black form thrust itself in before him, and Sam led the way, unarmed except for the formidable weapons with which nature had provided him.

The greedy garnerers of Breed's golden harvest were taken by complete surprise. They turned from their tasks as the men in khaki streamed in upon them, but their weapons had been laid aside, and they had only bags of money with which to fight, and these were too heavy.

Sam was shouting aloud. An irresistible demon, he clutched first one thin throat in his mighty hands and cracked it and threw the limp, resistless body aside and sprang for another, and the second man to fall before his savage onslaught was Ben White.

Blagg, with a mighty oath, sprang for Kelvin, who had entered just behind Sam, but one of Rensselaer's lieutenants was quick enough to intercept him. Blagg gradually bent his assailant backward and in the act managed to draw the lieutenant's pistol from its holster. In place of turning it upon his own antagonist he leveled it over the man's shoulder straight at Kelvin.

It was Sam who, shouting in a fever of savage joy, saw that motion and sprang to wrest the pistol from Blagg, receiving in his own breast the three bullets that the firearm yet contained. Then, his work done, he fell heavily to the floor, and upon his face was fixed forever that same sardonic grin that displayed all his snarling yellow teeth.

Kelvin, spent with his own efforts, stood erect to breathe for a moment, and in that moment a needle sharp dagger was thrust into his side. He tottered and fell, and above him knelt Lillian Breed, while before his eyes she held the dagger.

"See!" she cried. "This was your emblem of triumph! This was the sign in which you were to conquer! This was the instrument that twice threatened you and twice failed, but the third time it wins. Phillip, you made but one mistake. Had you put me at your side as your empress in this sign," and she held the dagger point upward, "we would have conquered the world, but you repudiated me, and in this sign you die!"

A soldier struck the dagger from her hand and bound her arms behind her, as those of Blagg had already been bound. Rensselaer, unscathed, looked down upon Phillip, with tears moistening his eyes.

"Take him out carefully, boys," he said, "but get him into the air quickly!"

As they passed through the library Rensselaer's eye happened to rest again upon that motionless, gray haired woman at the library table, struck down by his own Gatling, and as he recognized her he turned faint and almost dropped his burden.

"Here," he told one of his men, "help carry him. I cannot."

He almost stumbled into the outer air, and the men followed him with Kelvin, and, covering him to the breast with a sheet hastily snatched from Breed's couch, laid the first and last emperor of America flat upon the porch at the edge of the steps, where the cooling breeze might blow upon his brow. He lay pale and rigid under the yellow porch light, and this yellow light was in a moment more augmented by a saffron glare that flared out as the roof, from a fire in the attic, started by the recent vandals, broke into a blaze.

"Charge!" came a sudden sharp voice from the shrubbery.

Started in the glare of the burning roof Rensselaer saw a host of men with fixed bayonets suddenly spring out of the dark shrubbery at the northwest side of the building and come tearing down upon them.

The word "Fire" was just trembling upon his lips when he recognized the advancing leader, rushing with drawn saber and pistol at the side of the first line in the column.

"Halt! For God's sake, halt!" he cried, waving the white sheet that he had snatched from across Kelvin. "A truce! For God's sake, Rollins, halt your men! This madness is all over!"

"ONLY MISTAKEN," HE SAID.

Kelvin is dead!" Within but a few feet of what must otherwise have been a desperate struggle the advancing column was checked, and Rollins heard briefly from the sickened Rensselaer what had happened. He strode up the steps and stood before Kelvin with bared head.

"Only mistaken," he said in benediction and forgiveness. Then he turned to his own followers and those of Rensselaer. "As president of the United States, vice Kelvin, I have become your chief commanding officer," he told them. "Kelvin is dead, but the republic still lives. Blagg and his consort will die this morning, and with them the rebellion is broken. Some restrictive legislation to be carefully and wisely considered must be made to keep down such appalling accumulations of wealth as may threaten our liberty and our republic. But, gentlemen, through it all the constitution of the United States still is sacred and supreme, and there," his voice took on a sudden ring of exultation—"and there waves its everlasting emblem!"

One grizzled old veteran of Sumner Rollins' ranks had brought with him a tattered old American flag that had gone through the war of the north and south and had unfurled its war stained stars and stripes to their gaze. There was a cheer, but only a feeble one. The men, almost with one accord, took off their hats, and moisture stood in their eyes.

A strange figure appeared among them. Old Henry Breed, still clad in his mockery of royal raiment, staggered to the door. In his fall and through all that succeeded it his hands had convulsively gripped his money, and he still held it, green and orange, in his fingers.

"Cash!" his shrill old voice quavered as he flung it in the air. "Cash! The greatest force in all the world! The power that can totter thrones and disrupt governments. Cash! The life-blood of commerce! The golden lever of Archimedes! Cash!"

He stopped to laugh shrilly and allowed a soldier to seat him in a chair, where he drooled off into a jibbering mumbling. As he left the doorway his place was taken by Dr. Zelfhan. Both hands were filled with shawl strapped packages of his precious manuscript. He looked down at Breed a moment in contemplative pity.

"He will die the way he is now," said he. "His once remarkable brain is mere mush. He was a wonderful study, a most wonderful study, and the nearest approach to an absolute monarch of any resident of this globe. In the meantime, gentlemen, America has had her orgasm, and her nerves will be quieter now. I bid you good day. I am going to Switzerland." And he strode down the drive and around the trees at the bend.

Running around the corner came Elsie White, who had been bidden to stay back in safety, but who could not, and Rollins drew her to his side. The wind, blowing away some fleecy clouds, revealed in the east the first rosy glow of coming day, and the same grim old veteran who had brought with him the war stained battleflag broke in trembling accents into a song that cleared the still quivering air of the fevered "Marseillaise," that was caught up by a mighty chorus of newly freed men, that was at once the requiescant of Kelvin, a benediction and the promise of a new birth for the republic he had almost throttled.

Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hallo'd at the twilight's last gleaming?

STANDARD OIL IS ON THE RUN

High Court Puts It Out of Business.

HOLDING COMPANY DISSOLVED

Supreme Court Interprets the Sherman Anti-Trust Law as Applying
Only to "Bad" Trusts, and in This Category Places the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Ordering Its Dissolution.

Washington, May 16.—In connection with its decree ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the supreme court of the United States also handed down its interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law, long awaited by an anxious business world.

In this, the first of its big decisions in the anti-trust cases, the court holds that the Standard Oil company is a conspiracy in restraint of trade and a monopoly in contravention of the Sherman anti-trust law. Thus after a fight of many years in which every obstacle known to the legal profession has been interposed, the federal government has finally succeeded in its effort to compel this giant corporation to cast off its holding company and again to separate itself into its thirty-three constituent parts. To accomplish this gigantic undertaking the court sets a period of six months.
This is an extension of five months over the time allotted in the dissolution decree of the lower court. The decree of the circuit court was modified by the supreme court in only one other particular. The supreme court orders that the Standard Oil company and its subsidiaries shall not be excluded from interstate commerce pending the putting of its house in order.

The decision of the court fails to point any way in which the Standard Oil company may dissolve and reorganize. "We construe the decree," said the court, "not as depriving the stockholders or the corporations, after the dissolution of this combination of the power to make normal and lawful contracts or agreements, but as restraining them from, by any device whatever, recreating directly or indirectly the illegal combination which the decree dissolved."

Effect of the Decision.
The decision of the court in regard to the general interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law was awaited with greater anxiety by the business world than the finding of fact in the Standard Oil case. The court holds that it is necessary to distinguish between "reasonable" and "unreasonable" restraint of trade as covered by the Sherman anti-trust law.
The effect of the decision as viewed by distinguished lawyers, is to insert the word "unreasonable" in to the general prohibition in the Sherman anti-trust law against combinations in restraint of trade. The supreme court has thus eliminated the uncertainty with which all business combinations regarded the Sherman anti-trust law, and in the future it will be up to the government to draw the line between good and bad trusts. The anti-trust law as construed by the court does not apply to all combinations, contracts or acts in restraint of trade, but only to those which are shown to be unreasonable and in which the intent to form an unlawful conspiracy or monopoly can be proved or inferred.

Distinctly Reassuring.
The decision and its general effect was regarded here as distinctly reassuring to business. The decision of the court was read by Chief Justice Edward D. White. It was unanimous with the exception of Associate Justice Harlan's dissent. Justice Harlan's words were marked by biting sarcasm. He contended that the court had not gone far enough, and he objected particularly to the words of the chief justice in construing the scope and purpose of the anti-trust act. He declared that the court had rendered an opinion that reversed an unbroken line of decisions for fifteen years past.
He criticised the corporation lawyers who, failing to get an amendment to laws through congress, came to the United States courts for relief. He added with manifest sarcasm that it was becoming fashionable to amend the constitution and the federal statutes by judicial constructions.
It was the interpretation of the Sherman law so as to apply only to unreasonable combinations to which Associate Justice Harlan objected.

Affects Only "Bad" Trusts.
Attorney General Wickersham and other officers of the administration do not, however, share the gloom that seemed to enshroud Associate Justice Harlan. Wickersham and F. B. Kellogg, who was special counsel for the government in the preparation and trial of the case, declared themselves greatly pleased over the decision. The attorney general in a public statement holds that substantially every proposition contended for by the government was affirmed by the supreme court. The attorney general acknowledges that his office will now be restricted in bringing actions under the Sherman law to combinations which are unreasonably or unduly restrain-ing interstate trade or commerce.

NOTHING TO SAY AT STANDARD'S OFFICE

26 Broadway Is Mum On the Decision.

New York, May 16.—Representatives of the Standard Oil company in this city refuse to comment in any way on the decision handed down by the supreme court. The statement made at the Standard Oil building at 26 Broadway was that nobody connected with the company would have anything to say regarding the decision until they had had time to digest it.

M. F. Elliott, general counsel for the company, and John D. Archbold, its vice president, left their offices after the first news regarding the decision and its tenor reached here, but neither had anything to say.

It has been estimated that the assets of the Standard Oil company, which the highest court has now ordered to be dissolved, amount to $600-000,000 in plants and properties.
Since the company took over the stocks of the various subsidiaries it has never issued annual reports and its earnings have never been made public except when brought out in court proceedings. For the last seven years it had paid dividends of $40 a share. In 1900 and 1901 it paid $48 a share. Its lowest dividend was 36 per cent in 1904. These dividends were paid on an outstanding capital stock of $98,338,000.

While the capitalization of some of the subsidiary companies has been increased, no change has been made in the holding company's stock, though about the time of the beginning of the recent suit it was reported that such a plan was in contemplation. Serious consideration of such an increase, however, was put over until the result of the suit was known. In 1909 the stock got down to $635 a share and later, in 1910, to $585. Its low record for this year was $617. Yesterday it sold at $679. The high-water mark for Standard Oil stock was touched in 1901, when it sold for $843.

DIAZ WILLING TO SETTLE IT

Peace Plans Said to Have Been Agreed Upon.

HIS RESIGNATION NOT PRESSED

Otherwise, Practically All the Important Demands Made by Insurrectos Have Been Conceded by the President, According to Word From Mexico City, Which Comes by Way of the Provisional Capital.

Mexico City, May 16.—It is said on excellent authority that the resignation of President Diaz has been handed to a special committee of congress to take effect at once. A committee called on the president and asked to withdraw it before it was presented to the entire house of deputies for action.

El Paso, May 16.—Peace plans have been agreed upon, information from Mexico City has it, and General Diaz is willing to concede the fourteen governors out of twenty-seven states and four out of eight cabinet members demanded by the insurgents. The matter of the resignation of Diaz is not to be pressed.

The insurgents think General Rabago is coming from the south with federals to try to retake Juarez.
Orozco, with 2,000 men, will march to meet the federal forces, departing as soon as possible. Many believe that the departure of the insurrecto troops is especially desired by the political leaders, who believe that military inaction has caused much of the trouble of last week. Orozco himself is eager for the march. He is happy at the prospect of a fight with his ancient enemy Rabago, who broke through his lines and relieved the city during the first attempted attack on Juarez.

Orozco will be in actual charge of the movement, assisted by Lieutenant Colonel Villa and other commanders.
Colonel Guiseppi Garibaldi has resigned from actual command of his men.
The Italian soldier, to whom General Navarro surrendered, had 680 men, who now are led by Major Raoul Madiero. Colonel Garibaldi remains on Madero's staff and declares he is at the complete disposition of the leader.

Reports from a correspondent who came in along the line of the Mexican National railway indicate that the Maderists are in great force all down the line and that Rabago's chances of coming through are small.

DON'T WANT PEACE

One Wing of the Insurrectos Hasn't Had Enough Fighting.

Laredo, Tex., May 16.—When news that Madero and the federal government of Mexico might renew peace negotiations came here the noisy insurrecto sympathizers in Laredo and the secretly whispering ones across the river in Nuevo Laredo were unanimous in saying that they did not want peace, and would not abide by any terms that Madero might accept.

Any armistice that may be between Madero and the Diaz government will not be observed by the rebels in the states of Tamaulipas and Coahuila; that assumption seems to be based on perfect knowledge the anti-Diaz agitators here have of the temper of the insurgents in this territory.

MANY SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED

Adult Bible Class Movement Will be Considered at Annual Rush County Sunday School Convention.

TO BE HELD THURSDAY, JUNE 1

All Organized Classes in County Are Urged to Send Delegates to Meeting.

Great things are expected of the annual Rush County Sunday School convention which will be held in the United Presbyterian church Thursday, June 1. A number of interesting things have been planned and it is hoped that the crowd will be larger than ever before. Among other things of note which will be discussed is the Adult Bible Class Movement.

The Adult Bible Class Movement did not spring up in a single day, but the growth has been very remarkable. The last few years have been marked by special activity along these lines. Many classes have grown to enormous proportions. Wherever these classes have been organized and properly managed great good has come not only from the class meetings but also there has arisen a greater interest in all departments of the Sunday school. The Sunday school is no longer a place for women and children. The up-to-date Sunday school has men in it. The success of the adult classes is due in most instances to two things—good teachers and organizations. The latter is very important for the success attained has given each member of the class something to do. Constantly the adult classes are furnishing workers for the school and for the church.

Rush county has a large number of adult classes doing excellent service. Not all of the classes have become chartered classes. This step will widen the sphere and influence of the classes. All that is necessary to have a chartered class is to elect a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer and then organize three committees—membership, social and devotional. After this send to the Indiana State Sunday School Association at Indianapolis the result of the organization, enclosing twenty-five cents. Then a certificate of recognition will be given showing the connection with both the State Association and with the denomination of the class.

All organized classes in Rush county should send delegates to the Sunday school convention to be held in Rushville, June 1, as the opportunities of this movement will be discussed.
